"The County Fair."

Neil Burgess' Comedy Company will be at the Academy Saturday night, December 3, with that wonderfully successful of successful plays, "The County Fair," the cast including most of the original company. No company based on such phases and incidents of rural life has achieved greater applause nor merited it so well as "County Fair," which presents an ever-varying scene of New England country existence, the universal course of which is broken here and there by skillfully constructed epochs, stirring, yet wholly within bounds of the probable.

Of the company, Mario Bates in the part of Abigail Prue, appropriately described as "proud, prudish and practical," yet possessed of such a big, generous heart as to overlook all these faults, if faults they be, enters so earnestly into the creation as to impress one with a sense of its sincerity. W. H. Burton, the Otis Tucker, a farmer and bachelor, beloved of Miss Prue, but of too dull a wit to recognize the fact, is a typical ruralist, with his ponderous movement and drolleries of speech and gait; Tim, the tanner, Henry Simon, who rides the race horse Cold Molasses to victory and wins the $3,000 stakes which enables Aunt Abby Prue to pay off the mortgage on her comfortable and dearly-beloved homestead, is the ideal jockey, and discovers the racing virtues of the horse, which he in secret labors to develop.

If there is a villain in the "County Fair" it is Solon Hammerhead (Fred K. Maynard), farmer and sheriff, who holds the mortgage, and finds himself with an anxiety to obtain Abigail Prue, in company with her farm, and in his calculating way. Sweet Sally Greenway (Ella Salisbury), who turns out to be Tim's sister, and sturdy Joel Bartlett, whom Sally loves; and then the great race scene, with five thoroughbred race horses running at full speed three-fourths of a mile in full and continued view of the audience. Everybody should see this great play and secure their seats in advance.

Injured by a Runaway.

Walter Burnett, a colored youth of about 15 years of age, was run over yesterday morning by a runaway team, belonging to Huff & Co., near the crossing of Campbell avenue and Commerce street. The boy was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried to the office of Drs. Koerner and Gale, where Dr. J. B. Lenney rendered the surgical attention. The youth was still in an insensible condition last night and was suffering with congestion of the brain. The doctor thinks the result will not be of a serious nature.

Judgment Against the Manly Company. Messrs. Wright and Hoge, as counsel for Messrs. Priddy and Dunlap for the benefit of H. R. Coleman and S. D. Ferguson, entered suit in the circuit court yesterday against the Manly Manufacturing Company for $700 damages, they claiming that amount on material furnished in the construction of the new jail.

An attachment was issued against the money due the Manly Company by the city and against Henry county for a contract the company has there.

Old papers, 15 cents per hundred, for sale at this office.

VINTON.

For several months chicken thieves have plied their trade continuously and boldly in this town. Hardly a night has passed recently that they did not rid the roosts of some housewife of her fowls fattened or fattening for the table.

Friday night two of the thieves were apprehended near the Crozer furnaces by Officers Pollard and Fuqua at 3 o'clock a. m. They were loaded with hens and chickens. Three were in the crowd and one effected his escape. The two that were captured gave their names as Henry Moffet and Sam. Markham. They stated that their companion who got away from the police is named Ed. Williams. All three are negroes. Moffet and Markham were jailed and taken before Squire Gunn yesterday morning, who after examination sent them on to the grand jury. They are all residents of Roanoke city.

The usual services will take place in the various churches here to day.

George T. Cook, of Bonsack, was in town yesterday.

A concert will be given in the Presbyterian Church next Thursday evening.

Reese Lawhorne, of Bedford, was on our streets yesterday.

James Thaxton, of San Francisco, Cal., and his sister, Miss Nannie, of Thaxton's, are the guests of Mrs. M. J. Riley.

Miss Nora Dillard, of Scottsville, is visiting Miss Jennie Patterson.

A fine young horse was stolen from M. L. Fellows Thursday night. On the same night a lot of fowls were also stolen. There is no clue to the thief.

A tiresome performance.

A very poor performance was given at the Academy last night by the "Round the World in Eighty Days" Company. The play dragged and the eight acts were tiresome and uninteresting. A brilliant audience was present, most of the boxes being occupied by box parties.

The greatest bargains ever before offered in tea, dinner and toilet sets—our own importation. The E. H. Stewart Furniture Company.

Old papers for the next week at 10 cents per hundred.
